Studio User Guide

How to update the website.

WHAT'S INSIDE

The basics	Signing in, drafts, publishing
Artwork	Adding pieces and getting them onto a gallery page
Events and Pages	Shows, and the three pages you can edit
Images	Cropping and alt text
When changes appear	Everything is live the moment you publish
Quick fixes	The usual causes when something looks wrong

`bbart-svelte.netlify.app`

The basics

- Sign in with the account you were invited with. No invite yet? A developer sends one.
- Everything you type saves as a draft straight away. There is no Save button and you cannot lose work by closing the tab.
- A draft is not on the website. Click Publish at the bottom of the document to make it live.
- To take something off the site but keep it, use Unpublish. Delete is permanent.
- To undo, open the three-dot menu at the top and choose Review changes.

Where things live

Artwork	Every piece — paintings, prints, commissions
Events	Shows on the Exhibitions page
Pages	Biography, Her Studio, Exhibitions, and the menu
Footer Links	The social icons at the bottom of every page
Series, Image Type, Nav Category	The labels that sort artwork and build the menu

Artwork

Adding a piece

- Choose Artwork, then Create new.
- Title and Slug are required. Click Generate to make the slug from the title, then leave it alone.
- Price takes numbers only — the site adds the dollar sign. Turn on Sold and it shows “Sold” instead.
- A new piece goes to the top of the Artwork list, and to the top of its gallery pages.
- Drag rows in the Artwork list to move a piece somewhere else. That order is used on every gallery page, and it saves as soon as you drop it.

Which gallery a piece appears on

You don't pick a page. Each gallery collects artwork by matching the name of a Series or an Image Type.

Aspens	Series includes Aspen
Colorado Flag	Series includes Colorado Flag
Other Artwork	Series includes Other
Original Artwork	Image Types includes Original
Commissions	Image Types includes Commission
Fine Art Prints	A fixed set of three pieces

The names have to match exactly. Always pick an existing Series from the dropdown rather than typing a new one, and don't rename a Series — renaming Aspen empties the Aspens page.

Events and Pages

Events

- Fill in the title, date, time, venue, an image and a description.
- The Multi-day event switch changes the date fields. Off gives you one Date; on gives you Start Date and End Date.
- Past events drop off the Exhibitions page on their own. You never need to delete one.

Pages

- Three pages take their content from here: Biography, Her Studio and Exhibitions.
- Don't change the Slug on an existing page — it is how the site finds it.
- Navigation Title is the menu label, Order is its position, and Nav Category is which menu group it sits under.
- The Page builder on Exhibitions stacks four kinds of block: Text, Image with caption, Image pair, and Split content. Drag them to reorder.

Creating a new Page does not create a new web page. It adds a menu item that leads to a “not found” error. A genuinely new page needs a developer.

Images

- Drag and drop onto the field, or click to browse.
- Click the crop icon and set the hotspot — the part that must stay visible when the site crops the image to fit.
- Fill in alt text where the field offers it. Describe the picture rather than repeating the title.
- Upload the largest file you have.

Seeing it before you publish

On Events and Pages there is a Visual Editor button above the fields. It opens the real website beside the form, so you can click something in the preview to jump to the field that controls it. The preview shows your drafts; visitors still see the published version.

When changes appear

Everything goes live as soon as you publish. Artwork and its galleries, events, pages, the menu and the footer all pick up your change within seconds. There is no rebuild step and nothing to wait for.

If you can't see your change

- Check it is actually published. An orange dot on the document means there are unpublished changes still sitting in the draft.
- Refresh the page.
- For artwork, check it has the right Series or Image Type.

Quick fixes

Artwork published but not on the page	Check you pressed Publish — an orange dot means unpublished changes. Otherwise the piece is missing its Series or Image Type.
A gallery has gone empty	A Series or Image Type was renamed. Check the spelling.
A menu item goes to “not found”	That page has no address on the site. Clear its Nav Category to take it out of the menu.
Publish is greyed out	Look for fields marked in red — usually a required field left empty, or an end date before its start date.
An event is missing	Its date has passed, or the Multi-day switch doesn’t match the dates you filled in.
You want a change back	Three-dot menu, then Review changes.

Anything that needs a code change — a new gallery, a new page, a new kind of block — is a developer job.
